

Your Checked Baggage May Be Opened for Inspection in Thailand

2026 21 September

For aviation security purposes, checked baggage may be opened and inspected by airport operators if suspicious items, prohibited articles, or potentially dangerous goods are detected during the screening process.

Baggage inspections may be conducted without the passenger being present. The inspection process is video recorded, and a Notice of Baggage Inspection will be placed inside the baggage to inform the passenger that the bag has been opened and inspected.

To avoid delays and inconvenience, passengers are advised to:

- Ensure that checked baggage does not contain prohibited or dangerous items.
- Use TSA-approved locks to facilitate security inspections when necessary.
- Avoid placing valuables, fragile items, important documents, or essential personal belongings in checked baggage.

Proper baggage preparation helps streamline the screening process and contributes to a safer and more secure travel experience for everyone.
